

HR COMPLIANCE OVERVIEW

IRS Guidance on Tax Credits for Employee Leave Under the FFCRA

The Families First Coronavirus Response Act (FFCRA), passed in March 2020, required small and mid-sized employers to provide paid employee leave for specific COVID-19-related reasons through Dec. 31, 2020. The FFCRA also provided tax credits for employers to cover the cost of the leave.

The FFCRA employee leave requirements expired in December 2020; however, subsequent legislation extended the tax credits for employers that continued to offer FFCRA leave on a voluntary basis. The credits are currently in effect through Sept. 30, 2021. They are taken against employment taxes and are fully refundable and advanceable.

The IRS has issued guidance on the tax credits, including answers to frequently asked questions (FAQs), a fact sheet and a snapshot document.

LINKS AND RESOURCES

- IRS FAQs on tax credits for paid leave provided after March 31, 2021
- IRS FAQs on tax credits for paid leave provided before April 1, 2021
- IRS fact sheet about tax credits for paid employee leave under the FFCRA
- IRS snapshot document about tax credits for FFCRA leave

IRS FAQ Topics

Key topics covered by the IRS FAQs include:

- Eligible employers
- Qualified sick leave wages
- Qualified family leave wages
- Qualified health plan expenses
- How to claim the credits
- Periods during which credits apply
- Substantiating eligibility
- Deductibility of tax credits
- Interaction of tax credits
- Third-party payers
- Self-employed individuals

Important Dates

March 18, 2020

Families First Coronavirus Response Act passed, providing employer tax credits for required paid employee leave.

Dec. 27, 2020

Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2021, extended the tax credits through March 2021.

March 11, 2021

American Rescue Plan Act extended the credits through Sept. 30, 2021.

Provided to you by Wallace Welch & Willingham

WALLACE WELCH & WILLINGHAM

INSURANCE & RISK MANAGEMENT SINCE 1925

HR COMPLIANCE OVERVIEW

Employee Leave Under the Families First Coronavirus Response Act

The FFCRA, enacted March 18, 2020, required employers with fewer than 500 employees to provide 80 hours of emergency paid sick leave and 10 weeks of expanded paid family leave for specified COVID-19-related reasons. These leave requirements expired Dec. 31, 2020.

The Employer Tax Credits

The FFCRA allowed employers to take a credit against payroll taxes to cover the following costs of the leave:

- Qualified sick leave wages;
- Qualified family leave wages;
- Qualified health plan expenses allocable to employee leave wages; and
- The employer's portion of Medicare tax related to the qualified wages.

Employers with fewer than 500 employees are eligible for the credit, with the exception of federal government employers and any agency or instrumentality of the federal government that is not a 501(c)(3) organization.

Extension and Amendment of the Employer Tax Credits

After the FFCRA leave provisions expired at the end of December 2020, the Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2021 extended the tax credits through March 31, 2021, for employers that continued to offer FFCRA leave voluntarily. The ARPA, passed in March 2021, extended the credits again, this time through Sept. 30, 2021.

The ARPA also expanded the FFCRA family leave tax credit, allowing it to apply to:

- Family leave taken for FFCRA emergency paid sick leave reasons
- Family leave taken for reasons related to COVID-19 testing and vaccination

The ARPA additionally increased the family leave wages eligible for the tax credit to $12,000 (up from $10,000) per employee and struck the FFCRA requirement that the first two weeks of family leave be unpaid. The tax credit limit is $511 per day and $5,110 total for paid sick leave, and $200 per day and $12,000 total for paid family leave.

The ARPA also expanded the tax credit for emergency paid sick leave. Specifically, the ARPA permits the credit to be taken for a new bank of emergency paid sick leave of 80 hours per employee, beginning April 1, 2021. Further, the ARPA added COVID-19 testing and vaccination as qualifying reasons for emergency paid sick leave, just as it had for expanded paid family leave.

IRS Resources

The IRS released and updated a series of FAQs on tax credits for FFCRA leave taken before March 31, 2021. Later, the agency issued FAQs on tax credits for FFCRA leave taken after March 31, 2021. Key topics covered include:

- What is an eligible employer?
- Determining the amount of the tax credit for qualified sick leave wages
- Determining the amount of the tax credit for qualified family leave wages
- Determining the amount of allocable qualified health plan expenses
- Determining the amount of allocable collectively bargained contributions
- How to claim the credits
- How should an employer substantiate eligibility for tax credits for qualified leave wages?

HR COMPLIANCE OVERVIEW

- Periods of time for which credits are available
- Special issues for employers: taxation and deductibility of tax credits
- Special issues for employers: interaction of the FFCRA tax credits with other tax credits
- Special issues for employers: use of third-party payers
- Special issues for employers: other issues
- Special issues for employees
- Specific provisions related to self-employed individuals

In addition, after the ARPA was passed, the IRS issued a fact sheet and a snapshot document about the tax credits.